A Conversation About Motivational Interviewing with

David O'Halloran

"Motivational interviewing could just as easily have been called 'motivational conversation'..." Bill Miller, co-creator of Motivational Interviewing

"Motivational interviewing is the ability to trust the wisdom of someone to know what is best for them. And to structure a ... conversation, so that they work it out for themselves." Stephen Rollnick, co-creator of Motivational Interviewing

Come along to have a conversation about what is Motivational Interviewing ...and what it isn't.

David O'Halloran is an occupational therapist with more than 35 years' experience in disability employment and vocational rehabilitation services including direct service delivery, program management, project management and policy development at a local, national and international level. David's PhD research at Monash examined the reasons why nearly 4 million appointments are missed with Australian employment service providers every year.
